For Question 1: Original Question:

Please outline how adult (>18-years-old) Type 2 diabetes care is structured in the ICB, including how primary care, community care and secondary care services interact and the roles / responsibilities they each take.

I am particularly interested to know when and why patients are referred into consultant-led care. This can be a written summary by the commissioning lead for Type 2 diabetes, in a commissioning policy or a service map.

To clarify, please confirm there are no Type 2 Diabetes services in the ICB?

There are type 2 diabetes services commissioned in the ICB through the providers below:

Diabetes care provided in primary care is included in the National General Practice guidance.

Referrals to the three Trusts as listed below require GP referral. Referrals are a clinical decision made by the referring clinician.

For Question 2:

Your response would suggest that there are providers of elective and consultant led services for Type 2 Diabetes - the 3 trusts. Are there services for adults (>18) Type 2 diabetes that require a GP referral to access?
