YOUNG ADULTS

We're focusing each month on a different workstream within the programme and for this edition it's Young Adults.

Young Adults refers to young people aged 14 – 25 years old, and the Community Mental Health Transformation Programme highlighted the need early on in its work for targeted support for cohorts of young people; those who were approaching the transition into accessing mental health services as Young Adults.

Engagement with young people was vital in shaping how we go forward. The Voice Project, Staffordshire, held sessions with young people where they could give their feedback on shaping future mental health services; learning outcomes included that young people would like more choice in the types of treatment available, and whether they access the treatment online or through face-to-face appointments.

The aim is that the information and insight gained will be used to adapt services, focussing on access, transitions and partnerships, and there will be joint working across children's and adult services in health, social care and VCSE settings.

To find out more about this and the other key work and developments underway in Young Adults, you can listen to a podcast conversation with the workstream leads, Michaela Kemp from Midlands Partnership NHS Foundation Trust and Deborah Hargreaves from North Staffordshire Combined Healthcare NHS Trust, by clicking either MPFT's Podcast or Combined Healthcare's Combinations Podcast.
